

I am constantly amazed at the level of violent programming on TV (specifically crime dramas durring the hours of 6PM to 10PM) but moreso at the various advertisements for violent programming that I encounter while watching evening television. Recently "Star Wars Episode 2" was being shown in my area durring prime time (7PM -9PM I belive). While watching the afore mentioned movie which I considered to be a good "family" PG movie there was an ad for an upcoming Drama where they reffered to the fact that a killer was "Degloving and cutting the faces off of the victims so he could steal their identity". Such a concept was a bit distrubing to myself let alone a child.

I am able to control my viewing preference and avoid such programs but when they are advertised durring non-violent or less violent family programs my ability to choose what I or my family is exposed to is crippled immensely.
